Rural Reporters Making Waves

INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S DAY—March 8—is a global celebration of women's social, economic, cultural and political achievements. You can also mark the occasion March 28, when Writing With Fire airs on PBS.

The documentary, a selection of the World Cinema Documentary Competition at the 2021 Sundance Film Festival, profiles Khabar Lahariya, a newspaper in rural India run by an all-women newsroom. The paper, whose name translates to “waves of news,” employs journalists from Dalit, tribal, and Muslim communities, whose members have historically been marginalized.

Their coverage of rural issues, corruption and gender violence earned a Courage in Journalism Award from the International Women's Media Foundation in 2021.

“[Khabar Lahariya] has broken barriers to establish women as journalists in small towns and villages where newsmakers have long been men, upper caste and well-connected to the political system,” the foundation wrote.

Stays
lush and green in summer

Mow your Zoysia lawn once a month – or less! It rewards you with weed-free beauty all summer long.

7 Ways Our Amazoy™ Zoysia Lawn Saves You Time, Work and Money!

1 CUTS WATER BILLS AND MOWING BY AS MUCH AS 2/3

Would you believe a lawn could look perfect when watered just once? In Iowa, the state's biggest Men's Garden club picked a Zoysia lawn as "top lawn – nearly perfect." Yet, this lawn had been watered only once all summer to August!

In PA, Mrs. M.R. Mitter wrote, "I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in...Last summer we had it mowed 2 times...When everybody's lawns here are brown from drought, ours stays as green as ever." That's how Amazoy Zoysia lawns cut water bills and mowing! Now read on!

2 NO NEED TO DIG UP OLD GRASS

Plant Amazoy your way in an old lawn or new ground. Set plugs into holes in the soil checkerboard style. Plugs spread to create a lush, thick lawn, driving out weeds and unwanted growth. Easy instructions included with every order.

3 ENVIRONMENTALLY FRIENDLY

No weeding means no costly chemicals. Since Amazoy Zoysia lawns naturally resist insects, you'll save money, while helping to protect the environment. You'll never have to expose your family and pets to the risk of weed killers and pesticide poisons.

4 FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS AND PARTIAL SHADE

You can't beat Amazoy Zoysia as the low-cost answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas, places that have partial shade and erosion on slopes.

Meyer Zoysia Grass was perfected by the U.S. Gov't, released in cooperation with the U.S. Golf Association as a superior grass.

5 IT STAYS GREEN IN SPITE OF HEAT AND DROUGHT

"The hotter it gets, the better it grows!" Plug-in Zoysia thrives in blistering heat, yet it won't winter-kill to 30° below zero. It just goes off its green color after killing frosts, and begins regaining its green color as temperatures in the spring are consistently warm.

Thrives from partial shade to full sun.

Plant it from plugs.

6 CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER

Your established Amazoy Zoysia lawn grows so thick, it simply stops crabgrass and most summer weeds from germinating!

7 NOW 3 WAYS TO START YOUR AMAZOY ZOYSIA LAWN!

1) Freestyle plugs come in uncut sheets containing a maximum of 150 - 1" plugs that can be planted up to 1 ft. apart. Freestyle plugs allow you to make each plug bigger and plant further apart – less cutting and planting – you decide.

2) New Super Plugs come precut into individual 3"x3" plugs ready-to-plant (minimum 1 per 4 sq. ft.). They arrive in easy to handle trays of 15 Super Plugs. Save more time and get your new lawn even faster!

Cast-Iron Comeback

Versatile, time-tested cookware is reclaiming its spot among home chefs

From inside my home,

I could smell the wood smoke wafting across the lawn. It's a delightful blend of post oak and some fruitwood, and just the aroma makes me hungry.

With my smoker keeping a steady temperature of 350 degrees, I preheat a seasoned, 9-inch cast-iron skillet. Because it's an all-metal piece of cookware, I don't have to worry about plastic handles or Teflon coatings getting ruined by the heat.

Soon I've placed some homemade dough, tomato sauce, cheese and pepperoni in the skillet and back into the smoker. The woodsmoke-infused pizza will taste great, and the crunch provided by the cast-iron pan will give the pizza the texture I'm after.

Fifteen minutes later I have (at least in my estimation) pizza perfection, and it was made possible by a piece of cast iron handed down through my family over a couple of generations.

Cast-iron cookware is the ultimate utilitarian piece for the home chef, and while it's been used for nearly 2,000 years in one iteration or another, the venerated cookware is making a comeback because of its versatility and durability.

OPPOSITE Cast iron gives cornbread a crust you can't get in a baking dish.
ABOVE The cookware can be used on the stovetop or in the oven—paths to a perfect egg.

Old Reliable

Cast iron is a combination of iron, steel and carbon alloys blended in a forge to make iron that's tough and resilient enough to last decades.

Once molten, the steel is poured into a mold of compressed sand, and when cooled, the sand is shaken loose to reveal the nearly finished pan. Once the pan goes through a process to trim off the excess metal and polishing, it's ready for seasoning and use.

The Chinese first used cast iron for cooking nearly 2,000 years ago, and over time the iron casting process has been used to build cannons, architectural elements like bridges, and art. The technology eventually made its way to the Americas.

Colonial Americans used cast iron extensively for cooking, and as American settlers moved west, the cookware made its way across the plains and mountains on the back of chuck wagons.

"The chuck wagon cook is part of our Western heritage," says Kent Rollins, a chuck wagon cook, educator and YouTube personality. Rollins has been a cowboy and cook all his life, so he's got the hard-earned bona fides to have the attention of nearly 2 million subscribers. "If cast iron was good enough for ol' Cookie to take on the trail, it's good enough for me. We have some old cast equipment that's close to 100 years old or older, and it still holds up. If you take care of it, it will never wear out."

As cowboys and cattle peppered the plains in the great cattle drives of the 1880s, the need for portable food preparation was paramount. Camp cooks used Dutch ovens to prepare stocks, stews and even bread. Dutch ovens are pots with a large, flat lid that allows for the even distribution of coals across the top, so that heat comes from both the top and the bottom of the vessel. That even heating is essential for creating bread and cobblers—a staple of chuck wagon cooks everywhere. It's the same oven that Rollins recommends to first-time cast-iron cooks.

He says that if you have a 12-inch skillet and a 12-inch Dutch oven, you can cook just about anything. New cast-iron cooks should start with cornbread to learn to control the heat from the coals, Rollins advises. Once you've mastered cornbread, other dishes become simple.

The versatility of the Dutch oven makes it a valuable piece of cookware.

"You get what you pay for," Rollins advises. "I always look for cast iron that's made in the USA. It's a bit higher priced than cast iron made elsewhere, but it's a lifelong investment, and it will give you something back every time you cook out of it."

OPPOSITE William Graves, the author's brother, slow-cooks red beans in a cast-iron Dutch oven over a campfire. RIGHT New potatoes are seared before being roasted.

Cooking Up a Story

The post-World War II era brought change to American kitchens. Pans made from newer and lighter materials and with nonstick coatings were appealing, pushing cast iron mostly out of favor.

But in the 21st century, cast iron has made a comeback, earning favor among professional and home chefs everywhere. Aside from its durability, cast iron heats more evenly and holds heat more efficiently than just about every other type of cookware. The simplicity of its design enhances the material's functionality.

In years past, the 9-inch frying pan and the Dutch oven were among the most common cast-iron pieces. But because of the resurgence, many manufacturers now offer skillets of all sizes, a variety of Dutch ovens, and myriad accessories and baking pans. As such, the demand for cast-iron cookware is still a niche of the total cookware market, but it's indeed gaining steam. Even small manufacturers like the Fredericksburg Cast Iron Co. see the potential for bringing a new pan to the marketplace.

"We initially introduced a 10-inch skillet with a smooth, hand-seasoned nonstick cooking surface, which is created using a handcrafted method of finishing and polishing," says Jay Mallinckrodt, founder of the boutique crafter of cast-iron skillets that was established in 2021. "This new approach resulted from the frustration of using so-called modern cookware that wore out quickly and a desire to avoid intimidating rough, coarse and sandpaperlike cast-iron surfaces that proliferate the ironware market. Our result is heavy-duty cast-iron cookware that is 100% made in Texas and can last for generations.

"Very few high-quality cooking products in the market today can be purchased for less than $200," Mallinckrodt says. "A good cast-iron pan will not only cook your meal, but it will also bring families and friends together. That pan also becomes an heirloom piece and will last for generations."

Wild game chef Jesse Morris, who has cooked in high-end restaurants and hotels in Dallas, swears by cast iron. He advises that any protein you cook in cast iron benefits from the controlled crisping and searing that it provides. Beyond that, he says, cast iron adds to the story of a meal.

"There is an allure of cooking with well-made pans," Morris says. "Cooking is full of romance, and it tells a story. When you take the time to make something special and you're using a grandparent's old skillet or Dutch oven that has been well seasoned and made smooth from years of stirring, it helps add to that story." ■

Seasoning and Caring for Cast Iron

BY RUSSELL A. GRAVES

There's something about the flavor when you cook on cast iron that brings food like bacon and eggs alive. I also love cast-iron cornbread, which has a great crust on the bottom, and that brings a flavor that you can't replicate.

Before you cook on cast iron, there's one simple step required: Season the pan. You may wonder why. It's pretty simple: When you season a cast-iron pan, you help protect the metal, and add a little bit of nonstick properties to the cast iron. So as you use your pans over and over, the cookware becomes more and more seasoned.

To start the process, a good washing is in order. I use a stiff dishwashing pad and scrub it as best I can. You'll hear some people say that you shouldn't put soap and water on a cast-iron pan, and while that's true after they've been seasoned, when refurbishing a pan, you'll want to try to get all the dirt and grime off it.

After a good washing, place the pan on a stovetop set to medium heat to evaporate all the water. After a slow cooldown, wipe the pan with a towel to make sure all the moisture is gone.

Next, use some sort of cooking oil (I use shortening) and rub down the entire pan. While coating, preheat your oven to 350 degrees. When the pan is coated, place it in the oven on the middle rack and let it heat evenly for a couple of hours. Once the pan is cooled, you should have a properly seasoned pan. Regular use will continue the seasoning process, and the pan will darken over time.

To clean cast iron, simply wipe it down with a dry towel. If you need to scrub the pan, just reseason it in the oven.

POWER OF OUR PEOPLE

HOPE IN♥A BOX

A breast cancer survivor sends care packages of recovery aids to women all over the world

The large, unadorned box that arrived on Kim Carpenter's doorstep contained just a few simple items—a big shirt with inside pockets, a long pillow, personal notes of encouragement. But it meant the world to her.

Carpenter had just been through several grueling months of chemotherapy for her breast cancer and was about to undergo a double mastectomy. She felt lost and confused.

"Then you see that box and open it. It's exciting because you know somebody cares enough to send you something that will be helpful," Carpenter says, choking back tears as she recalls that day in January 2021. "It is a blessing, even though it's just a pillow and a shirt and a few other things. It's hope in a box."

Carpenter, who lives in Brookshire, west of Houston, is one of more than 6,700 women who have received a care package from the Blessing Box Project, founded by breast cancer survivor Dawn Compton, a San Bernard Electric Cooperative member who lives in nearby Bellville. And the community of supporters is growing.

Compton's work is rooted in her own experience. She recalls crying all the way home from the doctor after learning she had breast cancer in March 2018. Through the tears, she prayed, asking for the strength to help others in their fights—though she wasn't exactly sure what that meant. She says she's always been a helper. Her motto: Do as much as we can for as many as we can for as long as we can and then rest.

"I was crying and I said: This is not my choice, so it's yours. I will do what I'm supposed to do," Compton says she told God. "I will open every door I'm supposed to go through. Put me in front of whoever needs me, who needs to hear my story."

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT Blessing Box Project founder Dawn Compton, who often gets help from volunteers. Gabby Smith irons for Blessing Box. Tinley Malota, Compton's granddaughter, and Tinley's aunt, Madi Compton, sew shirts. Belle Ary helps ready a shipment. Kim Carpenter, a recipient of a Blessing Box, sews for the cause.

To keep busy, Compton started knitting caps for women who lost their hair during chemotherapy. As she worked on each one, she prayed for the person who would wear it.

When she found out she would have to undergo a double mastectomy, she scoured the internet for information about what to do after the operation.

She found instructions for making a special shirt to wear and a pillow. The oversized men's shirt called for adding two pockets on the inside to hold lengthy drains that are attached to the breast removal site. The long pillow "hugs" the upper torso, providing comfort as the patient sleeps, rides in vehicles and does other activities.

"I just started out making a couple of pillows to keep my sanity," she says. "Now, it's my life."

Compton also found support through Facebook pages for women undergoing breast cancer treatment. After posting about the two shirts and pillow she made for herself, she got a private message from a Fort Worth woman asking if she would do the same for her. Compton did and sent it to the woman in a box. The woman thanked her online, which prompted several more requests.

Compton kept sewing, and the requests kept coming in. While unloading boxes one day at the post office, a friend asked her what she was doing. Compton explained, and the woman offered to help, as did others. Her first sewing group met in nearby Nelsonville.

"We thought we were knocking the world apart doing 50 boxes that day!" she says.

Her "pink sewing tribe" has since grown and meets on alternating Saturdays at churches in Bellville and Hempstead to make items for Blessing Boxes. On one Saturday, the women met to assemble contents for 125 boxes. They ended up filling 132.

"Everybody just does their own thing," Compton says. "I couldn't do this by myself anymore."

She gets help from beyond her sewing posse. Thrift stores donate collared men's button-down shirts. Volunteers in several other states make pillows and mail them to her, and an elderly woman in nearby Industry contributes about 30 handmade pillows a month. The owner of a dry cleaner has even pressed shirts for the project.

Supporters make other items for the boxes: One crafts pocket crosses with a short Bible verse, and another makes small prayer quilts. Compton also gets pens, socks, keychains and more. "I send out whatever comes in," she says.

Compton declines payment for the items, but she will accept postage costs if the recipient can cover it. Some pay more. People donate items, prompting Compton's daughter to create an Amazon wish list for donations.

Compton has shipped the boxes all over the United States, to Puerto Rico and to several other countries, including South Africa, Afghanistan and Australia.

“What has really struck me is the kindness I see,” she says. “People have no one, then they open their box and they are moved to tears because someone cares. It’s the difference between walking alone scared to death and knowing somebody is behind you saying you can do this.”

Carpenter felt cared for when she received her box.

After her surgery, it hurt to lower her arms all the way down to her sides. But the pillow eased her pain by wrapping around her front and tucking under her arms so she didn’t have to close them against her body. The shirt held the drains that she called annoying.

Carpenter also was moved by the personal messages written on the pillow and the pockets inside the shirt. The notes told her people were praying for her and that she was strong enough to make it through this ordeal. All Blessing Box Project shirts and pillows have similar messages.

Now, after chemo, surgery and radiation, Carpenter says she’s doing great and helps out when she can with Blessing Boxes—mostly stuffing pillows since she isn’t a seamstress.

“It’s neat to have a bunch of women together working to bless other ladies,” Carpenter says. “It’s amazing what Dawn has done with this project. She’s motivated; she’s hardworking.”

Compton is well known around Bellville for her passion for and commitment to the Blessing Box Project and other community activities, said John Spiess and Lari Samford, employees of San Bernard EC.

“She is extremely active and supportive of a lot of things in our community,” Samford says.

Spiess’ wife, daughter and granddaughter volunteer with the Blessing Box Project.

“Dawn is very much a strong Christian woman, and she puts that into her Blessing Box effort. Your Silver Passport to Travel the World

The 5 Most Popular Pure Silver Coins on Earth in One Set

Travel the globe, without leaving home—with this set of the world's five most popular pure silver coins. Newly struck for 2022 in one troy ounce of fine silver, each coin will arrive in Brilliant Uncirculated (BU) condition. Your excursion includes stops in the United States, China, South Africa, Australia and Canada.

We've Done the Work for You with this Extraordinary 5-Pc. World Silver Coin Set

Each of these coins is recognized for its breathtaking beauty, and for its stability, even in unstable times, since each coin is backed by its government for weight, purity and legal tender value.

2022 American Silver Eagle: The Silver Eagle is the single most popular coin in the world. 2022 represents the first full year of release of the Silver Eagle's new Eagles Landing reverse design, introduced midway through last year to honor the coin's 35th anniversary. Struck in 99.9% fine silver at the U.S. Mint.

2022 South African Krugerrand: The Krugerrand continues to be the best-known, most respected numismatic coin brand in the world. 2022 is the 5th anniversary of the first silver Krugerrand. Struck in 99.9% fine silver at the South African Mint.

2022 China Silver Panda: Since its first issue, the China Panda coin series has been one of the most widely collected series ever, highlighted by one-year-only designs. This 2022 Panda features its first-ever privy mark honoring the coin's 40th anniversary. Struck in 99.9% fine silver at the China Mint.

2022 Australia Wedge Tailed Eagle: Introduced in 2014, the Wedge-Tailed Eagle is the first-ever collaboration between U.S. Mint designer John Mercanti and a foreign mint. With a new design for 2022, it's struck in 99.9% fine silver at the Perth Mint.

2022 Canada Maple Leaf: Since 1988, the Silver Maple Leaf's elegant design has made it a highly sought-after bullion coin. The 2022 coin features anti-counterfeit security technology—radial lines and a microengraved maple leaf with the number "22". Struck in 99.99% fine silver at the Royal Canadian Mint.

Exquisite Designs Struck in Precious Silver

These coins, with stunningly detailed designs and gorgeous finishes that speak to their country of origin, are sure to hold a revered place in your collection. Be Prudent When Choosing a Solar Contractor

SOLAR ENERGY IS booming as many homeowners turn to harnessing the sun's rays to produce their own electricity using rooftop solar panels.

But with the increasing popularity of solar power, some businesses are taking advantage of the surge in consumer interest. While many solar companies are genuine and truly want to help consumers with a successful solar installation, there are bad actors to watch out for.

You've likely heard a story or two about solar vendors who promised rooftop panels that would generate enough electricity to power an entire home. Then, after the homeowner has paid thousands of dollars for the installation, the panels don't work, and the vendor is nowhere to be found. Sadly, this story has been the reality for many consumers.

If you're interested in solar panels for your home, consider these tips before installation to avoid getting swindled:

Talk to an energy adviser at Heart of Texas Electric Cooperative first. We want you to feel confident about any decisions you make about your home energy use, especially decisions about generating energy at home.

Collect quotes from at least three solar companies to ensure you're getting a competitive deal. As with any major purchase, research is key, so thoroughly read customer reviews for each solar vendor and check that they're listed on the website of the Texas Solar Energy Society, txses.org.

If you speak to a solar vendor and they use high-pressure tactics—like an offer that's only good for 24 hours—run! Any reputable solar company will recognize that you need time to review a proposal and consider your decision.

If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. So if a solar company is making promises that sound unachievable and outlandish, they probably are. Remember, if you have questions, you can always count on your electric co-op for advice.

When it's time to review and sign a solar contract, make sure the language is clear and easy to understand. Ensure any verbal promises are included in the contract. HOTECH's experts will be happy to sit down with you and your solar provider to review quotes and specifications you receive.

Heart of Texas EC now offers solar and generator sales—a trusted local option for purchasing these products and services. Contact us at (254) 840-5136.

Going solar is a major decision that can cost tens of thousands of dollars, so do your homework first. ■

Do a 3-Step HVAC Test

AS TEMPERATURES RISE, so do electric bills as air conditioners run more. A three-step heating, ventilating and air conditioning test can help you determine if your AC unit is running at peak efficiency.

Before performing this test, the outdoor temperature should be above 80 degrees. Set your thermostat below the room temperature to ensure the system runs long enough for the test.

1. Using a digital probe thermometer, measure the temperature of the air being pulled into the air conditioning filter.
2. Measure the temperature of the air blowing out of a vent.
3. Subtract the vent output temperature from the filter intake temperature. There should be a difference of about 17–20 degrees. If the difference is less than 17 degrees, check the coolant level. If the difference is greater than 20 degrees, check your ductwork for restrictions.

Your HVAC system is essential to keeping your home comfortable. If it breaks down, the equipment can be expensive to repair or replace. With a little maintenance, you can add years to your system's operating life. ■

Know What's Below by Calling 811

SPRING IS JUST around the corner, and there's no better time to get outside and enjoy the fresh air. Perhaps you're making plans for a new garden or a lawn makeover. However you're planning to revamp your backyard escape, remember to keep safety in mind for all projects—especially those that require digging near underground utility lines.

Most of us never think about the electric, gas, water and other utility lines below ground, but hitting any of those while digging is not the reminder you'll want—trust us! Heart of Texas Electric Cooperative reminds members who plan a digging project to call 811 at least three business days before starting. Or you can submit a request online by visiting texas811.org.

How It Works

After you call 811 or submit your request online, all affected utilities will be notified of your intent to dig. It may take the utilities a few days to get to your request, so be patient. The affected utilities will send someone out to mark buried lines with paint or flags. Before you break ground, confirm that all the involved utilities have responded to your request. If you placed your request by phone, use the process explained by the 811 call center representative. If you submitted your request online, refer to your 811 center ticket to confirm everything.

By taking this important step before you break ground on your project, you help protect not only yourself but our community. Disrupting an underground utility line can interrupt service, cause injuries and cost money to repair, so remember to call 811 first and know what's below.

Dig Safely

Once you get the go-ahead, remember these safe digging practices:

- ▶ Use appropriate digging equipment for the type of hole you're digging.
- ▶ Don't ever attempt to move a utility line.
- ▶ If something goes wrong, call 911. ■

Look Up Before You Plant

SPRING IS A good time to plant shade trees, which eventually will grow up and out and cast some nice shade on your house, keeping it cooler during the summer.

But beware of where you plant. Tree branches can conduct electricity, creating a possible shock hazard for utility workers who need to service overhead power lines that are too close to towering trees.

Do some homework about the trees you've chosen before you plant them. Know how tall and wide each one will grow. That way you can plant it in a spot where, when it's fully grown, it will still be at least 10 feet away from a utility pole and overhead wires.

Here are a few other smart springtime cautions:

- ▶ Call your electric cooperative and 811 before you dig a hole to plant a tree—just to make sure you won't interfere with underground lines on your property. That one is not only a safe practice; it's the law.
- ▶ Don't climb a ladder that's within reach of a power line.
- ▶ Hire a professional to prune any tree branches that are near overhead wires. That's not a job for a do-it-yourselfer. ■

Tips for Adjusting to Daylight Saving Time

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME begins at 2 a.m. Sunday, March 13, and many people dread losing an hour of sleep as the clock springs forward.

For most folks, settling into new routines after a time change takes several days, but for others, it can be dangerous. One study showed that fatal accidents increase the Monday after a time change.

Adjusting to the change can be hard, but a few tips from The Old Farmer's Almanac can help.

Get enough sleep. Even though it might be tempting to stay up later to make use of the extra daylight, going to bed at the same time can help you stay energized. So can getting about eight hours of sleep before and after the transition.

Wind down before bedtime. Turn off the TV and put away the phone, tablet or computer about an hour before going to bed. Those electronics emit light that stimulates the brain and hinders melatonin production. Turning them off also helps cut back on electricity use.

Establish a healthy dinnertime routine. Don't change your dinner-time to adjust for the time change. Eat at the same time or earlier a few days before and around the time change.

Get some sunshine. Light from the sun helps regulate the body's internal clock, so go outside in the days after the time change and get some sunshine. Using an alarm clock with a light can help you wake up with more ease too.

Sneak in a nap. If you have trouble getting enough sleep at night, take a short nap—about 20 minutes—to help balance your sleep deficit. Ward off sleepiness by going outside and soaking in some sunlight for a few minutes.

Starting the adjustment process a few days ahead of the time change can help you slip into daylight saving time gracefully. ■

DID YOU KNOW?

Lighting accounts for about 15% of an average home's electricity use, and the typical household can save about $225 in energy costs per year by using LEDs.

Put Money Back Into Your Pocket With HOTEK Rebates

HEART OF TEXAS ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE is proud to offer energy efficiency rebates to our members. The program is designed to encourage cost-effective, energy-efficient measures at home and in the office that can reduce the overall cost of power.

Those who have taken advantage of these rebates in the past know what a great value they are. The following rebates are available to members.

LED Bulbs

Receive three free LED bulbs per membership. Pick them up at the Rosebud or McGregor office.

Home Energy Audit/HVAC Tuneup

Get up to a $75 rebate on a heating, ventilating and air conditioning system audit and tuneup. Proof of audit and completed work is required.

Ceiling Insulation Upgrade

Get a $275 rebate with upgrade from R0–R8 to R38-plus (air conditioning and resistance heating). This rebate applies to existing homes only.

Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio Heat Pump

Qualify for a $100 rebate for 15-SEER heat pumps or a $200 rebate for 16-SEER heat pumps (total electric only). This rebate applies to new and existing homes.

High-Efficiency Water Heater

Earn a $75 rebate on the purchase of a water heater with a 0.92 or greater energy factor for installation in a residence or business using HOTEK services.

Solar Installation

Get a 10-cent rebate per watt on solar installations. The maximum reimbursement per member is $500.

For more information, contact Ron Poston at ron@hotec.coop or call 1-800-840-2957. ■

Going the Extra Mile

Did you know electric cooperatives maintain more miles of power lines per consumer and acquire less revenue than other types of electric utilities?

Even though they serve fewer consumers and acquire less revenue (per mile of line), electric co-ops always go the extra mile, maintaining a tried-and-true record of delivering safe, reliable electric service to the members they serve.

Thank a Farmer on National Ag Day

MARCH 22 IS National Ag Day, hosted by the Agriculture Council of America. This is the 49th anniversary of Ag Day and will be celebrated in communities across the nation.

This year's theme is "Growing a Climate for Tomorrow." ACA will host a virtual Ag Day event in Washington, D.C., and will bring college students to Washington virtually to deliver the message of Ag Day to Capitol Hill.

Statistics provided by the American Farm Bureau reveal that there are 2 million farms dotting the American landscape, 98% of which are operated by families. While these farm and ranch families comprise less than 2% of the U.S. population, they produce 86% of U.S. ag products. One U.S. farm feeds an average of 166 people annually.

For more information on Ag Day, visit agday.org. For more statistics about the American farmer, visit fb.org. ■

Stay Safe and Avoid the Big Green Box

WHILE TRANSFORMERS FOR overhead power lines are mounted atop tall utility poles, padmount transformers are placed at ground level.

Whether mounted high or low, transformers change voltage from higher levels to lower levels that people can safely use in their homes for their electronics, appliances and lighting.

To stay safe around those big green boxes, observe these tips:

Keep areas surrounding padmount transformers clear so that workers can safely access them when needed. Co-op technicians need at least 10 feet of clearance on the opening side of a padmount transformer and approximately 4 feet of open space at the rear and on the sides of the metal housing. These distances allow for tool use, including hot sticks, which are typically 8 feet long and used to work with energized equipment. It also ensures that technicians working on a transformer have space to maneuver if problems occur.

Respect these distances when planting shrubs or building structures. Restricting access not only can prolong outages but also can create a significant safety risk for employees.

Never dig near padmount transformers; they are surrounded by underground cables. Hitting a cable could result in electrical shock or disruption of service. Always call 811 before you dig.

Make sure children know to never touch, climb or play on padmount transformers. Never put fingers, sticks or other objects through openings in a transformer.

Report problems. If you notice anything amiss, like an unlocked transformer or one that has been damaged, please contact Heart of Texas Electric Cooperative immediately. ■

POWER TIP

The Department of Energy recommends a temperature setting of 35–38 degrees for the fresh food compartment of a fridge and zero degrees for the freezer.

The Shoes

Two Marine families become linked on a sorrowful path

BY ALEX A. RAMON JR. • ILLUSTRATION BY JOHN KACHIK

SEVERAL YEARS AGO our son, Staff Sgt. Alex A. Ramon III, received the dreadful news of the passing of a close Marine friend, Cpl. John C. Flynn. They had previously served together on one of many combat tours in Iraq and Afghanistan. Alex was John's squad leader—and the only son of my wife, Drucilla, and me.

With tears in his eyes, our son slowly said, "Dad, one gets calloused in seeing awful things in war, but you never get used to seeing a fellow Marine die."

Our son was processing the news when he got another phone call. The family of Cpl. Flynn was requesting our son's presence. A Marine was needed to supervise and assist the funeral home on the proper placement of their son in his dress blue uniform. Our son left to support his friend's family.

Arriving in Arkansas, Alex immersed himself in the sorrowful task at hand. At the funeral home, he immediately noticed that John's shoes for his dress blues were missing. A call to the family requesting the shoes provided no results. Without further burdening the family, our son took the initiative and acted quickly to remedy the situation in time for the funeral. Alex subsequently kept in touch with John's family and provided them comfort the best he could.

Two years later, the unimaginable occurred—our son passed away. Alex died December 6, 2015, from cardiac arrest caused by mixing alcohol with opioids he was prescribed to treat post-traumatic stress disorder.

How can you understand or explain the pain of losing a child? Nothing can prepare you. Remembering what our son endured emotionally with the task of supervising the preparation of his friend for the funeral, we requested the Marine assigned to this duty not be a friend or an acquaintance of Alex. We did not want to inflict more sorrow on any of Alex's friends.

Funeral arrangements had to be made, and we were numb. The sudden loss placed us in limbo, but as with John's family, we received a call from the funeral director, who said, "We have received the uniform, but we still need his shoes." We had no idea where our son's shoes were.

As the arrangements were progressing, minus the shoes, one of the Marines who came by to give his condolences had been contacted by John's family and said they wanted to speak with us. John's dad told us his family was coming from Arkansas and would like to attend our son's funeral. I said, "Of course, this would be nice. My wife and I would be extremely grateful and would surely welcome the support."

John's father paused—then proceeded to request a favor. He said, "It would be an honor if you would allow Alex to wear John's shoes." At this point I was stunned since I knew the funeral home needed shoes for our son's uniform. Had John's father spoken to the funeral home? I was confused but at the same time relieved. "Of course we would do it; it would be an honor," I answered.

John's father recounted the story of how his family could not locate John's shoes before their son's funeral. Now that time had passed, they had unexpectedly found the shoes, and he went on to describe the unselfish act our son performed the day of their son's funeral. Knowing John's shoes were missing, Alex had taken immediate action, removing his shoes and placing them on his friend. We had no idea all this had occurred. Our son never mentioned what he had done.

We told John's family that we could not find Alex's shoes to give to the funeral home. Now we knew why.

The burial proceeded, and our son was buried with John's shoes.

Although it has been years since our son's funeral, it feels like yesterday. An invisible wound remains, but faith remains the best remedy for the pain, especially believing that God intervened in the lives of these two Marines and made this amazing story possible. Two different families, from two close friends, were tasked to walk in each other's shoes.

What is left now are loving, indelible memories of our sons and a living testament of the bond Marines share that transcends explanation. ■

Clogged, Backed—up Septic System...Can anything Restore It?

DEAR DARRYL: My home is about 10 years old, and so is my septic system. I have always taken pride in keeping my home and property in top shape. In fact, my neighbors and I are always kidding each other about who keeps their home and yard nicest. Lately, however, I have had a horrible smell in my yard, and also in one of my bathrooms, coming from the shower drain. My grass is muddy and all the drains in my home are very slow.

Dear
Darryl

My wife is on my back to make the bathroom stop smelling and as you can imagine, my neighbors are having a field day, kidding me about the mud pit and sewage stench in my yard. It's humiliating. I called a plumber buddy of mine, who recommended pumping (and maybe even replacing) my septic system. But at the potential cost of thousands of dollars, I hate to explore that option.

I tried the store bought, so called, Septic treatments out there, and they did Nothing to clear up my problem. Is there anything on the market I can pour or flush into my system that will restore it to normal, and keep it maintained?

Clogged and Smelly – El Paso, TX

DEAR CLOGGED AND SMELLY: As a reader of my column, I am sure you are aware that I have a great deal of experience in this particular field. You will be glad to know that there IS a septic solution that will solve your back-up and effectively restore your entire system from interior piping throughout the septic system and even unclog the drain field as well. SeptiCleanse® Shock and Maintenance Programs deliver your system the fast active bacteria and enzymes needed to liquefy solid waste and free the clogs causing your back-up.

This fast-acting bacteria multiplies within minutes of application and is specifically designed to withstand many of today's anti-bacterial cleaners, soaps and detergents. It comes in dissolvable plastic packs, that you just flush down your toilets. It's so cool. Plus, they actually Guarantee that it restores ANY system, no matter how bad the problem is.

SeptiCleanse® Shock and Maintenance Programs are designed to work on any septic system regardless of design or age. From modern day systems to sand mounds, and systems installed generations ago, I have personally seen SeptiCleanse unclog and restore these systems in a matter of weeks. I highly recommend that you try it before spending any money on repairs. SeptiCleanse products are available online at www.septicleanse.com or you can order or learn more by calling toll free at 1-888-899-8345. If you use the promo code "TXS15", you can get a free shock treatment, added to your order, which normally costs $169. So, make sure you use that code when you call or buy online.

Bad to the Bone

Full tang stainless steel blade with natural bone handle —now ONLY $79!

The very best hunting knives possess a perfect balance of form and function. They're carefully constructed from fine materials, but also have that little something extra to connect the owner with nature. If you're on the hunt for a knife that combines impeccable craftsmanship with a sense of wonder, the $79 Huntsman Blade is the trophy you're looking for.

The blade is full tang, meaning it doesn't stop at the handle but extends to the length of the grip for the ultimate in strength. The blade is made from 420 surgical steel, famed for its sharpness and its resistance to corrosion.

The handle is made from genuine natural bone, and features decorative wood spacers and a hand-carved motif of two overlapping feathers—a reminder for you to respect and connect with the natural world.

This fusion of substance and style can garner a high price tag out in the marketplace. In fact, we found full tang, stainless steel blades with bone handles in excess of $2,000. Well, that won't cut it around here. We have mastered the hunt for the best deal, and in turn pass the spoils on to our customers.

But we don't stop there. While supplies last, we'll include a pair of $99, 8x21 power compact, binoculars and a genuine leather sheath FREE when you purchase the Huntsman Blade.

Your satisfaction is 100% guaranteed. Feel the knife in your hands, wear it on your hip, inspect the impeccable craftsmanship. If you don't feel like we cut you a fair deal, send it back within 30 days for a complete refund of the item price.

The Inside Track

Railroads scattered—and united—early communities across the state

BY W.F. STRONG • ILLUSTRATION BY TRACI DABERKO

THE EARLIEST TEXAS towns took hold alongside protected bays (Galveston and Corpus Christi) and riverbanks (San Antonio and El Paso). But by the late 1800s, railroads were planting the seeds that raised towns. More than any other technology, trains ushered Texas into the industrial age.

The railroads got a slow start in Texas, but an attractive funding program allocated the railroad companies more than 10,000 acres of land and a $6,000 loan for every mile of track.

Towns developed along railroads for many reasons—one being that every 20 miles or so, steam locomotives required water. So water depots were built as needed, regardless of whether a favorable place for a town to prosper was nearby.

The far West Texas town of Valentine is such a case. The stop for the water depot was given that name because a railroad crew arrived there on Valentine's Day 1882. Some say, however, that the town was named for John Valentine, a major stockholder in the railroad. Both could be true (a twofer, you might say). The town of 130 or so people still exists, and the post office does a booming business for, you guessed it, Valentine's Day.

Some towns sprang up haphazardly because a construction camp lasted long enough for communal roots to grow. Langtry, along the Mexico border, was such a place. A tent town developed where the railroad builders lived while the project was underway, and the town was named for George Langtry, a railroad engineer for the Southern Pacific.

But Judge Roy Bean, famous as the Law West of the Pecos, rewrote that history to suit his own narrative. He sold worldwide the fiction that he had named the town for Lillie Langtry, the British American actress. He was so successful in selling this myth that she stopped to visit the town shortly after Bean died.

Abilene was created by the construction of the Texas and Pacific Railway line, with cattlemen and developers collaborating to establish a cattle market similar to Abilene, Kansas (for which Abilene was named). They needed room to build the cattle market, so the railroad bypassed Buffalo Gap, a more established community, prompting many in Buffalo Gap to relocate, since the railroad lines were the lifeblood of commerce in those days. Alongside those tracks on the first day of lot selling, the First Presbyterian Church was founded, and that prophesied the reputation of Abilene as having more churches per capita than any other town in Texas, not to mention three Christian colleges.

In 1860 the Houston and Texas Central Railway built a line through East Texas and created a depot that would become College Station. The school that would become Texas A&M University opened its doors in 1876. The next year the U.S. Postal Service designated the town College Station because that was the name of the railroad passenger depot. The railroad is still there, bifurcating the enormous 5,200-acre campus that it once bordered only on the west side.

The age of railroad dominance in Texas development is gone now, but the Lone Star State still boasts an important claim: Texas holds more miles of railroad than any state in the union—10,539—which still move the state's commerce. ■

Texas' Best

Turn this lineup of Lone Star icons into staples in your kitchen

BY MEGAN MYERS, FOOD EDITOR

So many things come to mind when one thinks of Texas food that it's hard to distill it into a few distinct dishes. Beyond that, each region puts its own spin on things, resulting in a wonderfully vibrant food culture from top to tip. Texas caviar is a dish that many folks have made their own since it first appeared in the 1940s. I add crisp bacon and avocado, though you can skip the bacon if you want to keep it vegetarian.

Texas Caviar With Bacon and Avocado

CAVIAR

- 1 can (15 ounces) black-eyed peas, rinsed and drained
- 1 can (15 ounces) black beans, rinsed and drained
- 1 cup corn kernels, thawed if frozen
- 1 red bell pepper, seeded and diced
- ½ cup diced red onion
- 1 cup halved grape tomatoes
- 2 slices crisp-cooked bacon, chopped
- ¼ cup chopped fresh cilantro
- 1 avocado, diced

DRESSING

- ½ cup olive oil
- ¼ cup red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon lime juice
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cumin
- ½ teaspoon pepper

1. CAVIAR In a large bowl, stir together black-eyed peas, beans, corn, bell pepper, onion, tomatoes, bacon and cilantro.

2. DRESSING In a small bowl, whisk together dressing ingredients. Pour half the dressing over salad and mix well. Add more dressing to taste.

3. Gently stir in diced avocado just before serving.

Pinto Beans and Jalapeño Sausage

SHARON CRISMAN-PARKER
CENTRAL TEXAS EC
SAN BERNARD EC

This hearty dish is perfect for showcasing locally made sausage. Crisman-Parker has been making this dish for more than 35 years and recommends the jalapeño sausage from Krolczyk Meat Market in Hempstead.

- 1 pound dry pinto beans
- 2 slices bacon or salt pork
- 1 teaspoon olive oil
- ½ cup chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped fresh cilantro
- 1½ teaspoons minced garlic
- ½ teaspoon cumin
- 1 teaspoon garlic pepper
- Pinch ground cayenne pepper
- 4 tablespoons chili powder
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 tablespoon pepper
- 1 package smoked jalapeño sausage, sliced

1. Soak beans 45 minutes–1 hour. Drain and rinse beans, then pour into a stockpot or Dutch oven. Add enough water to cover beans.
2. Add bacon and olive oil, and cook on low 15 minutes.
3. Add onion, cilantro, garlic, cumin, garlic pepper and cayenne. Cover and continue to cook on low 15 minutes, adding water if needed to keep beans submerged. Stir in chili powder, salt and pepper and continue to cook on low until beans begin to soften, adding water as needed. When beans are starting to

The aroma of the cooked icing for this sheet cake is irresistible, so don't be surprised if you sneak a taste while spreading it onto the cake. Skipping the usual chocolate addition helps Texas pecans shine in this crowd-pleasing dessert.

SERVES 24

CAKE

- 1 cup (2 sticks) butter
- 1 cup water
- 2½ cups flour
- 1 cup loosely packed brown sugar
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ cup buttermilk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten

ICING

- 1 cup (2 sticks) butter
- 2 cups loosely packed brown sugar
- ½ cup half-and-half
- 4 cups unsifted powdered sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups pecans, toasted and chopped

1. CAKE Preheat oven to 350 degrees and grease a deep 18-by-13-inch baking sheet or jelly roll pan.
2. In a small saucepan, combine butter and water and bring to a boil, then remove from heat.
3. In a large bowl, mix together flour, sugars and baking soda. Stir in buttermilk, vanilla and eggs; mixture will be thick and sticky. Carefully mix in the butter-water mixture and stir until smooth.
4. Pour batter onto prepared baking sheet and spread evenly to edges. Bake 20 minutes, until golden brown.
5. ICING In a large saucepan over medium-high heat, melt the butter and brown sugar, stirring to melt evenly. Boil 2 minutes. Stir in the half-and-half and bring back to a boil, then remove from heat. Whisk in powdered sugar until melted and icing is thick and creamy. Fold in vanilla and pecans. While cake and icing are still warm, pour icing on cake and spread to edges. Let cool before serving.

South Texas-Style Migas

CELESTE SMITH
PEDERNALES EC

Smith's South Texas roots informed her recipe for migas, which she has been making for her family for years. Enjoy the dish on its own or tuck it into flour tortillas and serve with refried beans.

Vegetable oil

1 green bell pepper, diced

1 small onion, diced

1 serrano or jalapeño pepper, seeded and diced

1 clove garlic, minced

3 large plum tomatoes, peeled

¼ cup chicken broth

1 teaspoon cumin

1 teaspoon salt, divided use

¼ teaspoon pepper

6 5-inch corn tortillas

4 eggs, lightly beaten

½ cup shredded cheddar cheese

1. In a saucepan over medium heat, warm 1 teaspoon oil, then add bell pepper, onion, and serrano or jalapeño. Sauté 5 minutes, until onion is transparent, then add garlic and cook 1 minute more.

2. Pulse peeled tomatoes in a food processor until chunky but not watery, then add to the saucepan along with broth, cumin, ½ teaspoon salt and pepper. Reduce heat to medium-low and simmer partially covered for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove the sauce from heat and set aside.

3. Cut tortillas into 1-inch strips, then cut in half crosswise. Cover the bottom of a large skillet with about 1 inch of oil and heat over medium. Cook tortilla strips until crisp, 7-10 minutes, then place on paper towels to drain excess oil.

4. Drain all but 1 tablespoon of oil and add eggs to warm skillet. Cook without stirring until eggs begin to set on the bottom, then draw a spatula across the bottom to form large curds. Sprinkle with remaining salt and return tortilla strips to the pan. Stir well and cook until eggs are set but still moist. Remove from heat, top with the sauce and cheese and serve.

Chomping at the Trip

Beaumont's Gator Country gives travelers a taste of the wild side

BY CHET GARNER

GROWING UP IN Southeast Texas, I always had a fascination with alligators. Every time my family drove past a marsh (which was a lot), I would eagerly scan, hoping to see a pair of eyes peeking above the water. Occasionally I would spot one and nearly burst with giddy excitement.

With that early influence in mind, you can imagine my thrill when I discovered Gator Country Adventure Park—home to more than 450 alligators, crocodiles and other reptiles just outside Beaumont.

My adventure started with a walk across a bridge spanning a pond packed with more alligators than I could count and continued with exhibits featuring snakes and turtles and at least six outdoor habitats. The pond for large gators had residents that measured more than 12 feet long, including one named Kong.

But no gator in the park can hold a candle to Big Al and Big Tex—two creatures so intimidating they each get a personal pond. Big Al measures more than 13 feet long and weighs a half ton. He was the largest gator in captivity in America until the arrival of Big Tex, measuring an inch shy of 14 feet.

Like most of the gators here, Big Al and Big Tex were rescued after being deemed nuisances and a danger to the public. For owner Gary Saurage, the park is a place where alligators can be cared for and serve as tools to educate the public instead of being killed.

Even though I found a new level of love and respect for these prehistoric creatures, I couldn't leave without also tasting alligator meat (sourced from a farm, not the park). So I ordered a basket of fried gator bites from the snack bar and marveled at how powerful—and delicious—alligators truly are. ■

Just Add Adventure

Flying leaps into the unknown—above or underwater—are the spice of life

BY PAM LEBLANC

FOR A NANOSECOND, as I sailed over the side of an 18-foot rubber raft churning through a swirling rapid at the bottom of the Grand Canyon, I second-guessed a personal mantra I adopted a decade ago: Get your hair wet.

Maybe whitewater rafting through waves as big as school buses on a 15-day trip organized by friends wasn't such a good idea. Then I caught a rope on the side of the boat, managed to hoist myself ungracefully back onto the bobbing yellow vessel and saw that my pal Jimmy, who'd also been pitched out, was getting a kayak tow to shore. That's when my belief was reaffirmed.

Yes, it's way better to take a flying leap into the unknown than it is to sit on the sidelines and watch everybody else have fun—as long as you're wearing a life jacket and helmet.

I'm not an adrenaline junkie. I don't take unnecessary risks. But for me, living means doing things that make me a tad nervous. It's why I scuba dive, backpack and try new things. Sometimes I succeed, sometimes I look like an idiot, but I always feel my heart beat and my mind expand.

The go-for-it mindset stems from my upbringing. When I was a kid, my dad took me on pint-size adventures. We explored the woodsy canyon at the end of our street, hopped cedar fences to gaze at dinosaur tracks, took a long drive to scout out a Volkswagen-size boulder balanced on the side of the highway. My dad found wonder in the simplest things, a trait I admire.

A few years ago, after returning from a 15-day backpacking trip on California's John Muir Trail with my husband, who has also clung with me by a metal hook to an ocean reef while hundreds of hammerhead sharks schooled overhead, I declared it my year of adventure. For 12 months I did things that scared me—from jumping off a 10-meter platform into a swimming pool to rappelling down a 38-story building while dressed as Wonder Woman and running a naked (except for a cowboy hat and shoes) 5K.

Injecting adventure into everyday life doesn't have to be extreme. It might be as simple as exploring a new neighborhood or swimming in the dark. It just takes a little creativity.

Search out a park you've never visited. Eat a food you've never tasted. Get on your bicycle and start pedaling. You might end up with a scraped shin or a bruised ego. I've suffered both, hundreds of times over.

But I've also logged some of the most memorable experiences of my life, including that dip in churning water in the Grand Canyon. ■
